

LOVE WINS IN A LONG GAME OF PATIENCE

Miss Anna Head, Heiress of Addison E. Head, the California Miner, on Way to London to Wed Lieut. Mounteney Jephson, Stanley's Assistant.

FATHER OPPOSED MATCH, BUT THEY WERE CONSTANT.

Jephson Sought Solace in African Adventure, His Sweetheart Bore Woman's Harder Task of Waiting, but Now All Obstacles Are Swept Away.

LIEUT. A. J. MOUNTENEY-JEPHSON.

Miss Anna Head, heiress to the great fortune left by her father, Addison E. Head, the millionaire mining man of California, will arrive in this city tomorrow with her mother, whence she will sail for London to become the bride of Lieut. A. J. Mounteney-Jephson, one of Stanley's assistants in the famous Emin Pasha's relief expedition. This simple announcement conveys the happy climax to a eleven years' romance such as the world rarely hears of outside the covers of a novel.

For eleven years the young couple had endeavored to persuade the millionaire father of the young woman to consent to their union. But Mr. Head would have none of the daring young explorer despite his splendid connections in the English nobility. He was a poor man and a younger son. The hard-headed old miner refused to settle a cent on the pair.

A Title or No Foreigner.
He told his daughter lately that if she married a foreigner it would have to be one with a distinguished title if she would have the paternal sanction and assistance.

Through Miss Head was a loyal daughter she was also a loyal lover. With the same firm determination as his own, she told her father that if he could not have the man of her choice she would remain single for the rest of her life. Her father and even her friends laughed at this statement, for it hardly seemed possible that a girl of her beauty, accomplishments and wealth would carry out such a threat.

When the lieutenant found that persuasive eloquence had no effect with his betrothed's father he returned to England, sorrowful at the failure of his suit, but happy in the assurance of his sweetheart that she would remain faithful to him as long as she lived.

This all happened in 1892, and immediately after his return to England Jephson started on another of his expeditions into the heart of Africa. He had hardly started when the Emin Pasha relief expedition was organized, and with the famous explorer Stanley Jephson set out. During the long and weary months in which the young lieutenant was an exile in the wilds of Africa he suffered from a fever which threatened to carry him off.

He was cut off from all communication with the outside world, and for nearly a year never saw his fiancée. Miss Head from her lover. Stories were spread throughout the world of the capture and torture of the young explorer. Many accounts were published, but the explorer's statements that he was dead.

She Never Wavered.
During all this time the young girl was being besieged by suitors, many of whom had the approval of her father. Her family and friends besought her to give up all idea of the young Englishman who had perished in the wilds of Africa. Nothing could persuade her, however, that her lover was dead. She asserted in face of all seeming proof that Jephson was alive. She knew it by that peculiar intuition which is woman's own.

Then came the news of the success of the expedition and the safety of the relief party. In the joy of her partial consent in 1894 the young man returned to California and the announcement of the coming marriage was published throughout the country.

The old miner hardened at the last moment, however, and withdrew his consent. Then came another parting, but the old vows of constancy were renewed, and when Lieut. Jephson returned to England he prepared again to lose himself in the heart of Africa. In fact, the explorer never had a false step. He was as true as steel. His wife, who had been his constant companion, advised him to go back to Africa to get rid of it.

In the nine years that have intervened since the last separation of the young couple, the explorer has spent most of his time in Africa. His wife, who has been his constant companion, advised him to go back to Africa to get rid of it.

HARRIET SAWYER, WHO SHOT HERSELF IN WOMAN'S HOTEL.

MISS SAWYER TO SEEK DEATH AGAIN

Actress Who Missed Her Heart in Effort to Kill Herself Declares She Will Yet End Her Life.

Harriet Sawyer lies in the New York Hospital bemoaning the fact that the bullet she intended should wipe out life's failures on the stage and in matrimony missed her heart by an inch. The beautiful young actress declares that her life is her own and that she will make another attempt at suicide which will be successful.

Miss Sawyer is a daughter of James Sawyer, a prominent Milwaukee Board of Trade man, and for ten years was one of the most prominent society girls of that city. Six years ago she came to New York to complete her musical education and met John Cecil Clay, the artist and magazine illustrator, who has a studio at No. 9 West Twelfth street. They were married, but quarreled three years ago and have lived apart since.

About ten days ago Miss Sawyer, who was singing in the chorus of a Broadway production and understudying a principal, was discharged from the company because she lacked sprightliness and was nervous.

Were Handsome Gowns.
A week later the tall, statuesque blonde, who is noted for her superb figure and handsome gowns, went to the Martha Washington Hotel.

Miss Sawyer in her room there fired three shots at her heart. One bullet passed completely through her body, an inch below her heart.

One Bullet Took Effect.
Manager Case kept his head and sent for a physician, who had the woman taken to the hospital.

At the hospital the detectives found Miss Sawyer was able to talk. She said:

"I was lonesome and despondent and I did not care to live. My life is my own, and I have a right to do with it as I please, no matter what the law may be. I was not successful this time, but I will do better the next. There is no room for any more romance in my life. Success on the stage and happiness are not for me. I intend to die."

Miss Sawyer is twenty-three years old. The physicians say she will recover.

When she obtained her divorce from John Cecil Clay three years ago Miss Sawyer went to board with Mrs. Jonas, at No. 115 East Twenty-fourth street, and remained there until three weeks ago. The landlady said today that Miss Sawyer became so hysterical and acted so peculiarly that she was forced to intimate it would be better if the actress secured other quarters. "I was afraid of her," declared Mrs. Jonas.

"Miss Sawyer used to talk about her husband and how dearly she still loved him. She expressed the belief that he had been too severe on Mr. Clay and wished she could have an opportunity to remedy the effects of what she considered now her hasty action.

"If I had been," continued Mrs. Jonas, "that Miss Sawyer could have advanced more rapidly had she been less unbending. She is a woman who keeps much to herself and has nothing to do with men. She always had plenty of money, which came from Baltimore. Then her father, who is a wealthy man, constantly supplied her with it."

"She was stage struck and in love with the man she divorced. I think these two things have partially unsettled her mind."

has been kept up by the lovers. Miss Head never broached the subject of her marriage to her father again. Neither would she listen to his entreaties to marry a title or one of the many wealthy Americans who sought her.

A short time ago Mr. Head died and as the young woman's mother did not oppose her daughter's marriage with Lieut. Jephson, arrangements were made to have the long delayed wedding celebration will take place at More House, Chelsea, Lady Jephson's town mansion.

ANCIENT MARINER KISSED THEM ALL

But Capt. O'Bryan, Seventy Years Old, Smacked the Lips of One Little Maid Too Many and Must Be Tried.

Kissing just for fun received a serious setback to-day, when Capt. Edward O'Bryan, the aged mariner and father of nineteen children, was held in $500 bail for trial by Magistrate Mayo in Yorkville Court.

Capt. O'Bryan was charged with assault, which offense was alleged to have been committed when he persisted in kissing and embracing Bessie Friedman, a pretty seventeen-year-old girl, who lives at Fifty-fifth street and Second avenue.

According to the wife and children of the prisoner, he is suffering from the kissing malady. In court to-day they declared that the Captain, who is seventy years old, is an inveterate flirt, and that since he has got along in years he has continually pestered the young girls in the neighborhood, with propositions of love. Agent Pooley, of the Children's Society, told the Magistrate that Capt. O'Bryan's actions are known to all the young misses of the neighborhood.

Capt. O'Bryan's wife and children live at No. 288 East Fifty-fifth street, Mrs. O'Bryan and two of the daughters were in court to-day, and when Magistrate Mayo called them to the stand they testified that the charges against the aged mariner were true. Johanna Dager, a winsome brunette, told of the Captain's kissing propensities, saying: "He kissed me twice, but the third time I objected."

Husband Is Gone.
"What have you to say to this?" asked the Magistrate.

"If I were to be hung for this there wouldn't be a policeman on the force who wouldn't hang, too," replied the prisoner.

"We don't intend to hang you," said the Magistrate, "and we have nothing to do with the police in this case."

Magistrate Mayo then held the prisoner in $500 bail for trial on the complaint of Miss Friedman.

WALDORF GUEST ROBBED.
Detective Saw Negro D the Trick in a Saloon.

Charles Gateley, a contractor, of Troy, N. Y., who has been staying at the Waldorf-Astoria for the last two weeks, was robbed in a saloon at No. 135 Macdougall street last night. He had no recollection of having been robbed, but Detective Charles Carroll, of the Mercer street station, says he saw a negro take a purse containing about $10 from Gateley's pocket.

The negro was placed under arrest and at the Mercer street station, the detective says, the money was found on him. He said he was Thomas Strong, forty years old, a porter, living at No. 238 East Seventeenth street.

Besides the money taken from Gateley there was found a key to the contractor's room at the Waldorf. The negro was held for examination.

QUEEN OF ITALY HURT.
ROME, July 17.—A slight accident to an automobile in which the King and Queen of Italy were driving took place in the Royal Park of Racconigi, near Turin, last Monday. It was during a turn of a hair that the accident occurred. The Queen jumped out, and in doing so turned her ankle. The accident was of no importance.

Then the attorney at once communicated with her family in Brooklyn, and it is said her relatives assured her that the money will be paid. At his request the prisoner was remanded until tomorrow.

CANDY
This week's special offerings have been selected with the greatest possible care and forethought. Any of them are well worth trying.

It's really foolish to spend money for candy when you can get the city-made kind for less than half the price, besides being absolutely certain that when you buy ours it is ABSOLUTELY FRESH. You don't get stuff that's been on the shelves for weeks waiting for a purchaser.

GIRL BRIDE IN COURT TELLS OF BAD CHECK

Brooklyn Youngster Who Ran Away and Married a Butcher's Boy Faces Stern Justice in Mount Vernon and Relates Her Woes.

PLEA SENT TO MOTHER TO SAVE HER FROM JAIL.

Finally Discloses Her Family Name When She Finds that She Is to Be Prosecuted, and Begs that Husband's Worthless Check Be Paid.

Her face swollen, her eyes red from crying, Mrs. Lillian Rogers was arraigned in the City Court of Mount Vernon to-day on a charge of passing a worthless check. Mrs. Rogers is the bride of a week whose husband escaped arrest by flight after she had passed a check for $15.84 in the clothing store of former Mayor Lewis.

Since then she has been at Police Headquarters while her lawyer, Gustave Hamburger, has been endeavoring to get her mother, Mrs. Mamie Johnson, of Clifton street, Brooklyn, to pay the amount of the check and thus stop the prosecution of Mrs. Rogers.

The arrest of Mrs. Rogers is the sequel to an elopement of the girl and her boy husband. The Johnsons live in Brooklyn, and it is said Mrs. Johnson owns several houses which bring in good rents and the family is well-to-do. Rogers, the husband of the girl, was a butcher's boy.

Loved the Butcher's Boy.
To-day the young woman told the story. She said:

"I first met Frank when he came to the house to deliver meat that my mother had ordered, and I grew to love him. My mother did not want me to have anything to do with him, but I loved him, and when he suggested that we get married and go away, I knew my mother never would listen to any such thing, but I consented.

"I did not know how much money he had and I did not think of that at all. We were married and came to Mount Vernon. Then he told me he had no money after a few days and that he would have to get some. He got a check and made it out on the Mount Vernon Trust Company.

"When it was found out that the check was bad I was arrested and he escaped. If mamma pays the amount I will go back home with her and say there always."

Husband Is Gone.
"I have not heard from my husband. I heard that he had gone to South America to escape arrest. I don't want to give Frank up, for I love him. Is it such a terrible thing to draw a check when you have no money?"

The plight of the girl has interested those with whom she has come in contact. For a week she has been locked up. No money was lost by the transaction and she appears to have suffered a great deal through imprisonment.

A little under the medium height, slight of figure, girlish to the extreme, with a pair of blue eyes, the girl looked strangely out of place when arraigned before Judge Bennett charged with uttering a worthless check. It was until her lawyer had talked to her and told her she was in a serious position and that the law was always in earnest with offenders that she told her mother's name.

Then the attorney at once communicated with her family in Brooklyn, and it is said her relatives assured her that the money will be paid. At his request the prisoner was remanded until tomorrow.
